Candidate A evidence

Transcript

She is not Pallas Athene, she is not able to find a fault in Envy's piece of work: the golden-haired goddess was jealous of the success and she ripped up the cloth embroidered with the divine crime.

And her hair immediately fell out touched with poison herbs, with which both her nose and ears, and her head became very small: on the sides of her body instead attached slender fingers, the rest to her stomach, however she spun thread from her and the spider practised her previous weaving skill.