	In the first section of the army, there was horsemen and elephants. The elephants were driven along steep and narrow paths. They arrived at the top of the Alps on the ninth day. From a certain look out point, where there was a view far far and wide, Hannibal pointed out Italian fields lying below the mountains to his soldiers. The rest would be level or downhill.
	Then they began to drive and make progress. But many found the journey more
