

Candidate 7 evidence

3a In this essay I aim to evaluate that social inequalities has more of an effect on women, poverty and race, ~~although rather~~ I aim to show you what these affect are.

Gender inequality is a big issue throughout the UK. Women are treated inferior to men in a number of different areas, let's take employment for example. The pay gap between men and women for full time workers was 15.7% rising to 18% among ~~middle class~~ part-time workers. Along with the pay gap, there is a term used to describe how it's unusual for women to get the top end jobs, ~~this~~ is called 'the glass ceiling'. It is basically a metaphor for the invisible ceiling preventing women from get the top end jobs. This shows that social inequality has a big affect on women (gender inequalities) as there is a considerable difference between What men get paid compared to women. Since there is a barrier preventing women from getting these better paid jobs, means that they are at more of a risk of living in poverty and making poor lifestyle choices.

Social inequality also has a big affect on people ~~in poverty~~ who experience racial inequality. With a ~~paying~~ pay gap of between 10-30% it is no wonder that minorities are statistically ~~are~~ poorer. People who experience racial inequality are also more than likely to be in bad employment or receive the worst ones. Statistically you are more likely to have low paid minorities employed in what are called burger flipping jobs.