

Candidate 1

ENTER NUMBER OF QUESTION	DO NOT WRITE IN THIS MARGIN
1.	Hume uses the terms ideas and impressions to explain the workings of the mind in his book, the enquiries. *^{pg 9} An idea is a faint copy of an impression. An impression is a direct experience from the senses. There is two types of ideas and impressions, simple and complex ideas, and inward and outward impressions. Simple ideas are ^{directly} from the impression, complex are simple ^{ideas that are} altered through the imagination. An inward impression is a feeling or emotion. An outward impression is an experience. The imagination can create

