3.	In Christianity, many followers do good deeds to help them obtain a good judgement from God in the after life. Some Christians, like the Salvation Army, focus on helping the poor and those suffering from addiction. By helping them to get a better, healthier life, Christians in the Salvation Army hope to get a good judgement and solely focus on actions to join God in Heaven unlike many other Christian groups. However, those in the Salvation Army do not do Holy Sacrament which are seen as mandatory, as many were alcoholics so the eucharist can't be done. Another form of Christian action is helping those suffering from addiction. Homes will be built so that those suffering have a safe environment to help overcome addiction and while they are Christian run projects, they do not only help Christians or

	force their religion on you as the point of the project is to help those suffering for a good judgement from god, and not to preach to people.
	Lastly, a form of christian action is missions which are groups of christians going to areas of deprivation/poverty to help them. These can be good for society as it allows help to be given for no price as its not about money but helping those in need. However, This form of christian action can be seen as forcing religion as they tend to preach and share the word of god<sup>god</sup> while helping an example of this would be when a group of American Christians came to
