QA	Krishna's role as an avatar is to teach Hindus about important things, such as when was Arjuna was going to war to win back his kingdom because he was the rightful leader of it, he saw his family on the other side &amp; decided not to fight. Krishna who was his best friend told him that it's his dharma (duty) to fight because he was in the warrior cast. Arjuna listened after Krishna revealed himself as the avatar of Vishnu, and won back his land. This story teaches Hindus to always follow their dharma &amp; that life is maya (an illusion) &amp; after you die you get reincarnated so death is not sad.
QA	Samsara is the cycle of life death &amp; rebirth. For Hindus samsara is something they try to escape. Escaping samsara is is call &amp; reuniting with Brahman is called moksha (final goal). To escape samsara you must complete your dharma (duty).

the are various ways to complete your dharma such as following a Marga. There are 3 margas, Karma Marga, Jnana marga & Bhakti Marga. Karma marga is the path of action it gives meaning to everyday actions. Jnana marga is the path of knowledge it's the best but hardest marga and not all Hindus can do it because it requires them to memorise scripture which not all castes are allowed to do. Bhakti marga is the path of devotion & is the most popular choice for modern day Hindus. Hindus can choose to follow one of these margas. ~~Hindus~~ Hindus believe that if you are avidya (ignorant) you wont escape Samsara.

this might effect Hindus by making them better people & try to generate good karma they could do whatever possible to do good but that could also mean thier only doing it to generate good Karma & not because it's good. It could also make

Hindus take a different approach &amp; become bad people &amp; never change their ways, because they feel as though they've already have bad karma which they will be punished for so there's not point in trying to improve. Karma means action
Q12a	How Always Hindus can follow their Dharma is by following a marga. They can choose between, Jnana marga (path of knowledge) which is the hardest but best marga, Karma marga (path of action) which gives meaning to everyday actions or Bhakti marga (path of devotion) which is the most popular choice for modern day Hindus. Dharma means duty. They could also follow their dharma by following their cast. For example the lower casts follow the job that they were born to do because without them doing it the community won't be able to function properly.

Q12b.	I agree to an extent because dharma (duty) is important to a Hindu's because it's a big part of their religion. It can make the world a better place because Hindus will try &amp; generate good karma (action). A Hindu's dharma is what will allow them to complete moksha (final goal) which is to escape samsara (cycle of life death &amp; rebirth) &amp; reunite with Brahman. However it might be bad because to complete their dharma, they should follow a marga. &amp; a Hindu may not be able to follow anyone of their choice because of their cast. This makes it unfair &amp; make some people feel inferior to others. However if they are in a lower cast they won't have time to complete it (jama marga - path of knowledge) because it's time consuming &amp; which will be hard because most people in the lower casts will have to work &amp; won't be able to give their full attention towards it. Some Hindus m A Hindu's

	might also be from the warrior cast &amp; their dharma will be to fight. This means if they want to follow their dharma they are required to fight. Which could lead to a lot of violence. Instead of using a less violent approach. A hindus dharma could also lead to them not reaching their full potential because they are soft in following their dharma they are not aware that they can do so much more (if they were in a lower cast). It could also have the opposite effect &amp; have people who are unworthy given power because it's their dharma.
