36.	The poet makes clear what the speaking is feeling by saying "Shallows of my breath" shows secrecy and her words are only for her and not for anyone else to hear and the words are repeated in hope of being remembered.
37.	The poet makes it clear that journey is unsettling by saying "too blue swapped for a cool grey" showing the movement between places but also the emotions that the different places make the speaker feel, this new place is different. "Nothing is silent. Nothing is not silent" which obviously can't happen but she's uncomfortable about the journey, everything is different, there are mixed emotions about everything to do with this journey.
38.	The poet presents the idea of growing up by saying "I am happy and sad" again you can't be both but a part of growing up is having

3.	In the Novel "Of Mice and Men" the author explores a interesting theme of "Hopes and Dreams" which can give hope which helps individuals not give up, which can be affected by the time period and They can sometimes not come true because of others actions. The Theme "Hopes and Dream" can give hope to individuals and encourage them to not give up. In "of Mice and Men" the main dream is the "American Dream". George and Lennie are two unlikely friends which have this dream "To own a couple of acres, some pigs" and have their own place to live and "live of the fat of the land". George repeats this dream to Lennie and they keep this hope to "build up a stake" so they can persue this dream and having this dream encourages them not to be "like other guys, that get the blow your stake on a cat house."

	"Hopes and Dreams" is is a theme where it varies on the time period if it is more or less likely to come true which makes it interesting in
	"Of Mice and Men" where it is set in the time of the drought, growing crops was hard to do and money was low which affected the whole population. George and Lennie kept high hopes hopes through this time even though and keep keep going as they had each other "because I got you, and I got you" through the "Sunny spells" and "Great lack of clean water" which was happened during this time which affected their dream as they can't "live off the fat of the land" if crops won't grow.

	"The Theme "Hopes and Dreams" can be affected by others actions. After George and Lennie let Candy join in with their dream, things were looking up as they were closer to than they ever had been before. Lennie was especially happy to "tend the rabbits" but Lennie's action of killing Curley's wife affected it, "He broke her neck". Lennie having learning difficulties "never done it out of meanness" he was always described as a "good guy" but he didn't know his own strength. It is interesting to see the reaction of Curley when he finds out and how George deals with the problem, George learned from Candy's mistake of not killing his own dog and making sure he didn't suffer, The Ending Proves George's friendship to Lennie and how his action, accidental or not made their dream not come true.

	In conclusion this theme is very interesting of "Hopes and Dreams" as it shows you can have so much hope and best Determination for a Dream but sometimes they aren't meant to be because a time period is limiting them or others actions can affect them.
