

Candidate 5 – Study

When you've got an exam you should start to study a week or two ^(weeks before) because if you start ~~the day before~~ ^{to study} it you shouldn't get enough marks. You need to get a good sleep so the next day when you are studying you'll be better at it and you won't get tired easily. ^{and before the exam don't stay up late because you will end up being asleep} The day before the exam, you should still go over your notes and be prepared for tomorrow. When ^{new pos} you're studying I'd love you to concentrate very well on the topics and ^(especially) the diagrams as well so ~~you~~ ^I don't mess ^{up} anything. You should concentrate ^{very} well on your exam and then you won't be worried about it. You don't need anything that's distracting you because that's hard to concentrate ^{when you are studying}. Sometimes ^{helps me to} it ~~helps~~ concentrating by listening music and when I read ~~my~~ notes ^{(loud) (this is)} out ~~it's~~ good because it's easier than reading it quiet.

You ~~don't~~ really need to ~~use~~ any social media all the time when ^{ile} you are ^{revising} ~~studying~~ because you forget to study and then the next day at your exam you have no idea what is going on.

If you use social media you can use it while your having a break which that will be more helpful and you won't get any notifications ^{or distracting} when your studying.

You really need to practise it at home as well for your spelling and writing English and see if you make any mistakes at it or not. Everything ^{is} worth a try because when your doing your exam you ~~it~~ ^{need to} try your best to don't do any spelling mistakes because that can help you to get less marks than usual. If you are aloud to use a dictionary you can check the word you are looking for and spell it correctly.

You need to research more on the internet to get more informations or if you missed any topics you ^(won't know about it and then find) can look at it. It's really helpfull to look at the same notes that you've got because you may add something ^(new) to your notes as well.

You don't need to study word by word because that's kind of cheating. The best thing is to memorise your notes so that will be easier for you to study and you won't have so much stuff to study. Before you go to the exam you should go over your notes if you're not sure about something. Always make notes for yourself which makes everything easy and ~~so~~ you don't need to panic while you are doing your exams because if you do you can forget something.
