Part 2 - Work

This report is about allowing staff to work from home for one day each week. My opinion on this idea is very high, I believe if all staff work together it would work perfectly. The first thing I will talk about is organising staff meetings, this will be a struggle as everyone would have different daily lives/routines while they are at home. It would be difficult to get everyone for a meeting at a certain time. ^(and struggles to actually complete)

Another reason as why this could not work ^{well} as staff would have to find time for both work and their family commitments, some households need more attention looking after whoever it may be, but some may normally get distracted while trying to concentrate on work. Some staff may prefer to work from home because it could suit them better ^{than} working away from home. For example it could be children, driving, disabilities and they fit better on different ^{ideas} sides. Most children get bored easily at home and that follows up by distracted the person who is trying to work. One other thing that could impact on this idea is the staff productivity, are all staff going to work as hard/do as much as they should if their in their own home? This could lead to 'having a wee break' or going away and having a day off because they think that they wont get called out for it. Will the manager trust every single staff to do as they have been told. This idea could go both ways very well or go downhill. If it does work well for the company then they can think into further ideas like keeping them off for just the one day or even make it longer if it would work. If it went downhill then the idea would have to be scrapped. If the team really want the day from home they all would have to work together. I would not want my staff go behind my back with an idea that could go very well.
