Part 2 – Work

This is
Here is my report in regards to the staff having one day to work from home.
This would be a great change, as long as it is executed properly.
For example, when staff are working from home, it's much harder to monitor them and make sure they are doing what they're supposed to be doing. It would require lots of trust. I think we should award trustable enough trustworthy employees to have one day working from home. Such as employees who have worked here for long enough to show them they can be trusted.
However, I do propose we give everyone a month's worth of this plan, so we can see how different people manage working at home. There are lots of distractions at our homes, so I suggest only those who start have high productivity working from home in the month should be permitted to do so long term, and anyone who wasn't able to get as much done should continue working in office.

Staff may become more concerned with family responsibilities. Which isn't necessarily bad for them, but would ~~be~~ have the potential to hurt productivity, which is certainly something to ~~be~~ take into consideration.

~~The~~ Everyone's individual work-from-home days should certainly be staggered and not on the same day. However, this could make organising staff meetings difficult.

I think this idea could work, but it must be done correctly, as it has lots of potential for failure with ~~loss~~ decreasing productivity.
